Custom cabinet designs add height, width, and architectural detail to walls, while offering the flexibility to create a truly custom look.

▶ Style

Your cabinets should reflect your home's character, and your individual style. A variety of cabinetry styles are available including Modern, Craftsman, Victorian, Classical, and Colonial. Once you determine your style, you can focus on details like door styles, hardware, and moldings.

▶ Species

Cabinetry comes in a variety of wood species, both domestic and exotic. Each species offers a unique overall appearance and differs in color, hardness, and price. Popular choices include maple, alder, cherry, hickory, African mahogany, beech, and walnut.

▶ Finishes

Finishes give cabinets their color, prevent UV damage, and add strength and durability. Multiple options are available including natural, stain, glaze, paint, and specialty finishes. Stain adds new color to the wood, giving you another opportunity to customize your cabinets to suit your personal style. Choose the finish that best matches your desired design and existing elements within the room.

▶ Functionality

Consider how much surface space you need, ease of accessibility to stored items, and overall storage requirements when choosing the design for your cabinets. Specialty appliances can be incorporated into the design. If you wish to display artwork or dishes, glass doors provide a beautiful way to cover your cabinets and add an elegant look to the wood. Display cabinets can be built into any room adding the perfect blend of storage and architectural detail.
